Below 3-5" of new snow there is a supportable frozen crust on top of a wet snowpack on most slopes. Avalanches are mostly confined to the new snow on top of this crust (wet loose, dry loose, wind slabs). However, where the snowpack did not freeze below the new snow, or when this crust melts, deeper wet slides are possible. Photo: GNFAC

Advisory Region
Bridger Range

Forecast link: GNFAC Avalanche Forecast for Sun Apr 7, 2019GNFAC Avalanche Forecast for Mon Apr 8, 2019
Bridger Range, 2019-04-06